

Nimm's Radl im Murtal - Individual bike tours from point to point

The Murtal adventure region has a unique cycle node system in Austria, which offers cyclists a new dimension of flexibility in tour planning and orientation. This system makes it possible to explore the region in a simple and uncomplicated way and enjoy the diverse cycle paths of Styria's largest inner-alpine basin to the full.

What is the wheel knot system?

The cycle junction system in the Murtal is a network of junctions that are signposted throughout the Murtal region, making it easier to find your way along the cycle routes. Each node is marked with a number so that cyclists can quickly plan and change their routes. Whether for relaxed excursions, sporting challenges or family outings - the cycle node system offers something for everyone.

This is how the wheel node system works:

1. find junctions: The junctions are clearly signposted at various points in the Mur Valley. The corresponding points can be found on a suitable cycle map, which is available free of charge online and in the region's tourist offices.
2. route planning: To plan your route, select the relevant junction where you would like to start (e.g. junction 1). Then plan your tour individually from point to point. Here you can choose from a network of over 100 points.
3. navigation and orientation: Follow the signs indicating the next junction. These are clearly numbered and marked with directional arrows.
4. flexibility: If you want to change your plans, you can turn off to another hub at any time and change your route.
5. discovery: In addition to the main paths, many routes lead through picturesque landscapes, historical sights and idyllic villages. Stop off, explore the surroundings and enjoy the diversity of the Mur Valley. The Murtal Tourism Association provides tour suggestions in the appropriate tour booklet, which, like the map, is available free of charge from the region's information offices.

The cycle node system in the Mur Valley is an ideal way to actively experience the region. Whether alone, with friends or family - take your bike and discover the beauty of the Murtal!
